As I know,.NET Framework 2.0 came at first, it's then 2.0.5, 2.0.6, 2.0.7, etc. and.NET 4.0 is come in 2011, and v4.5 came last week. So the question is, each version of the .net framework is composed from versions of the base class library and they had successive numbers, but the framework version is named with the final number, why and how? A: Here's my guess about it. Microsoft probably decided that the major version number reflected the advanced features present, and the minor number reflected the minor changes and bug fixes. Now, they've decided to bump up the version number every year. This is explained in more detail in a documentation. So, instead of .NET Framework 2.0.3,.NET Framework 4.5 will be.NET Framework 5.0 EDIT : See the Microsoft Docs ba244e880a
