How can I perform an async (ie. network) operation within this function so that my component continues to render normally? componentDidMount() { this.fetchData() //TODO: perform asynchronous image fetch } Is there some sort of hook I can use for this or should I go around it the same way I would any asynchrony in Redux? Thanks for the help! A: You could create a set of loading actions, and dispatch them depending on what needs to be loaded. If you want to show loading when fetching images: import { actionCreators } from'redux'; import loading from './loading.actions'; ... fetchData() { return dispatch => { dispatch(loading()); // TODO - rest of your method } } and then dispatch actions loading: dispatch(loading()) If you want to just show a spinner while fetching data, you could use a loading reducer that takes an initial loading state and a loading state function. import { combineReducers } from'redux'; import loading from './loading.reducer'; import spinner from './spinner.reducer'; function rootReducer(initialState) { return combineReducers({ spinner, loading, }); } export default rootReducer; and then const { loading, ba244e880a
