In my project there are some classes with a bunch of public members which are serialized using DataContracts. However, these members can be put in any order, some classes can even have members with the same name - this causes a problem with serialization. So I figured I'll fix this by using a sequence number to put them in an order. Then I'd have to create a constructor and set all the members in order. I'm sure I'm not the only one who encounters this issue
