In the future, consider using some IDE that can provide you a real on-line syntax highlight. Idea is to use the cursor and the Caret for navigating through the text, and replace by click, click all, cut, paste, etc. Then, you simply hit command-T to launch the syntax suggestion (more on-line/real-time than grep): Rules are always changeable, sometimes for the better, sometimes for the worse, but sometimes for the purpose of stopping or preventing something. Yesterday, the province of Ontario made amendments to the Essential Services Act to add cannabis dispensaries to the list of essential businesses that can remain open, even if they are not licenced to sell cannabis. It was announced that recreational marijuana will be legalized in Canada on October 17, 2018, which means that by December 14, 2018, pot dispensaries and other unlicensed sellers will be at risk of being fined by the province. Under the new law, anyone supplying cannabis to the public, even if it is not licensed by the Ontario government, risks being charged, and this includes mom and pop shops, and even chain stores like LCBO (the province-owned liquor stores). The new rules will make it a lot harder for people to sell pot without a government-issued license. For the most part, this new policy is a step towards legalizing cannabis, and that's not really going to change anything. Cannabis smokers will still be able to get weed, but they will have to do so with government-issued documents. If they don't, they might just end up getting fined by the cops.Q: How is a 'ticket' distributed? I'm working on a ticketing system for a company I work for, and I've encountered a situation where I'm not sure how to distribute tickets among the team. Let's say, for instance, I have created a set of tickets (their descriptions/an issue list). My team is
