Acute infection with Mycobacterium bovis in a patient with advanced myelodysplasia. A case of myelodysplasia in a patient with an associated acute infection with Mycobacterium bovis is reported. The patient, a 56-year-old man, had an aplastic anemia with iron overload for 2 years, and had been receiving blood transfusions and hematopoietic growth factor therapy for that period. The patient was admitted to the hospital because of a fever. A physical examination revealed hepatosplenomegaly and atypical lymphocytes. Blood tests indicated leukopenia, neutropenia, pancytopenia, elevated liver enzymes, and positive antibody against Mycobacterium bovis. After the diagnosis of aplastic anemia and myelodysplasia, it was decided that he would not receive chemotherapy. The patient was treated only with antibiotics for 6 months. The fever eventually disappeared and laboratory examinations showed a normal hematological status. Q: Safest way to put an exit button in a QMainWindow? I 2d92ce491b
