It will show you the command that could be used to run. Also try: xcopy "%UserProfile%\AppData\Roaming*.exe" "%AppData%\temp\oldapps.exe" /s Hope that helps. [Hypersplenism in a patient with acute myeloblastic leukemia. Disseminated intravascular coagulation. Apropos of a case]. This is a case of a 70-year-old patient with a myeloblastic acute leukemia in the blastic crisis. In the literature, this type of leukemia may be associated with a severe life-threatening hematologic condition known as "hypersplenism" which is due to the frequent hemorrhagic phenomena in this disease. This syndrome is characterized by severe thrombocytopenia, usually associated with the destruction of megakaryocytes. The etiology of this syndrome is obscure. It is possible that it is due to an increase in the splenic tissue destruction and in the plasma consumption that are known to occur during the blastic crisis. The therapeutic measures, based on the use of anticoagulant agents, make it possible to control most of the hemorrhagic manifestations. In this case, there was also an increase in the platelet level, which was not a constant finding in the patient.Q: Scripting a script to loop the elements of a list I am scripting a large number of slides to PowerPoint and I've got the following code to iterate through a list of links. For Each s As Slide In ActivePresentation.Slides For Each sst As Slide.Shape In s.Shapes For Each ssr As Slide.ShapeRange In sst.ShapeRange For Each ss As Shape In ssr.Shapes If ss.HasTextFrame Then ss.TextFrame.TextRange.Text = s.Hyperlinks.Item(0).Text
