It is a multi-purpose concert hall, capable of seating 2,400 people for musical performances and 700 for theater. The center opened in 1979, and has been renovated in 1989 and 2000. It is named for the Budnick Family Foundation, a pair of professors who donated the money to build the center. Events The facility hosts several musical and theatrical performances, as well as community events such as WRE's Kaleidoscope Concert Series and university athletic events. Performers include the New York New York Jazz Ensemble, the Chicago Youth Choir, the Eastern Illinois University Philharmonic, and the Western Illinois University Orchestra. Other performers have included the Rolling Stones and The Eagles, who performed during their Farm Aid concerts in 1993 and 1995, as well as numerous solo artists. The Budnick Center for the Performing Arts received the award of "Best Town/Village Wethersfield Award" from the Wethersfield Business Association in 1985. The building is on the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency and National Register of Historic Places.
