Jul 10, 2015 - 1 min I have a question regarding autodesk (vray) for 3ds max 2014. vray for 3ds max 2014 download, Autodesk 3ds max crack, vray for 3ds max 2014 serial.Q: C# equivalent of Ruby's String.downcase? Is there a standard function for this in C#? If not what would be the most efficient way of doing it? (I need it to be implemented in a case statement so that it sorts properly.) A: String.Compare A: There is no built-in equivalent function. However, string comparison is at least an O(n) operation (for non-null-terminated strings), and can be made as fast as a binary search (with more code) if you are willing to tolerate null references. If you need a case-insensitive sorting, use string.Compare(). Q: Turning a List(Of List(Of String)) into a Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) I have a List(Of List(Of String)) that is populated from a database query. I need to be able to perform operations on this List(Of List(Of String)) that involves taking a key(string), finding the value, and if it is there, adding a new value to the list. So far I've come up with this: Dim keysAndValues As New Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String))() For Each key As String In DB.GetRow("Select name from someTable") Dim list As New List(Of String) list.Add(key) keysAndValues.Add(key, list) Next This however does not seem to be the correct way to proceed. I am having trouble when I loop through this for each key. I am having trouble because I am not sure how to cast the List(Of String) that is being passed in to a Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)). I think what I want is to access the List(Of String) and cast that to a Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) but I don't know how to do that. I have been looking at the LINQ way of doing things, but am unsure how to do that here. 2d92ce491b
