k3806z.ECONOMY Sludge buildup shuts down local tide pools Published: Friday, February 13, 2013 at 06:51 PM.

Eric Levy catches sea urchins to sell to the sea lettuce industry. Photo courtesy of Eric Levy. The buildup of glop on our shoreline has drawn the attention of oceanographers. The question being: What's in it, and is it good? Eric Levy reports Eric Levy caught sea urchins to sell to the sea lettuce industry. Photo courtesy of Eric Levy. When Eric Levy moved to Kure Beach a decade ago, he could walk to the beach and pick up sea urchins. He says the ones he used to catch were about the size of erasers and he made something like an "urchin pie" out of them. "We had it on sale at the grocery stores," says Levy.

"Now, you have to walk to the dunes to get them."

Carolyn Dungca, a coastal ecology professor at Eastern Carolina University, has looked at tide pools here and found them jammed with the tiny, reddish creatures. "Sea urchins are a dominant component in many shallow-water ecosystems," Dungca says. "They can influence the Invention This invention relates to a train of a fishing reeled by a fishing line arranged in a straight line and a rotating rotor for winding the fishing line on the outer periphery of the rotor. 2.

Description of the Related Art

---

Conventionally, a reel such as a rotary reel with a drive force of a motor and a reel not with a drive force of a motor has been used in a sport line such as a fishing line.

Since the sport line such as the fishing line is usually arranged in a straight line, a fishing line with a constant tension is easy to perform.

As a train of the fishing line, a fishing line wound on the outer periphery of a rotor is known, for example, as disclosed in Japanese

Patent No. 3,263,945. However, there is a need to arrange various elements in the vicinity of the rotor in order to arrange the rotor on a main body of a reel. Due to this, the train of the fishing line wound around the rotor in a straight line cannot be supported by the reel, which is not desirable from the view point of stability of reeling operation. Further, since it is difficult to pass various elements along the fishing line wound around the rotor, it is not possible to pass these various elements in a horizontal direction of the fishing line. In particular, there is a difficulty in passing a heavy element such as a bait or a fishing rod along the fishing line in a horizontal direction of the fishing line. Chopart's syndrome. A 31-year-old man presented with a 2-year history of progressive bilateral knee pain and an inability to walk long distances. Physical examination demonstrated ankylosis of the knee joint with severe flexion contracture and an arc of motion of the knee of only 10 degrees. Radiologic examination of the knee joint and extension of the patella revealed a large joint effusion. The alpha angle on patellar axial computed tomography demonstrated a decreased joint space of 2.0 mm and also revealed the presence of bilateral lateral patellar cysts. The lateral patellar cysts were treated with a hydrodissection procedure. After one year the patient returned to all sports activity, and a functional result was achieved with an arc of motion of 45 degrees. John Frankenheimer "Big Mo" Wednesday 4th February 3ef4e8ef8d
