Inquest: The people are in the right, says Kent county coroner A death at a gun range should have been treated like any other. But instead, Kent coroner Peter Dawson found the 'lack of supervision' was 'significant' and leading to the 'deaths of three people'. This is the inquest's conclusions, as outlined in a report issued on Monday. The report, into the death of 25-year-old Oke Bertram, in 2010, said a 'lack of supervision' at the gun range led to 'the deaths of three people'. File photo. A death at a gun range should have been treated like any other. But instead, Kent coroner Peter Dawson found the 'lack of supervision' was 'significant' and leading to the 'deaths of three people'. This is the inquest's conclusions, as outlined in a report issued on Monday. Oke Bertram, who worked as a hairdresser, died when he was shot in the neck and was taken by helicopter to Maidstone Hospital. The report said: "A lack of supervision by the operators on the ground is likely to be a contributing factor in the deaths of three people at this range and it is a contributing factor in the death of a person at another". It said that the man who died after a round of .22 calibre target shooting was shot in the back of the head. The coroner said that the man had been checking the range for 'safety purposes' before the shooting and that it was unclear if he was AKVIS Watercolor is the first of its kind in the field of graphic software for real-time watercolor painting. It was designed from the ground up for the unique needs of the watercolor artist. Traditional watercolors require a lot of experimentation to achieve the right effect. A first guess at a solution can turn out completely different if you try the effect with a different brush. With AKVIS Watercolor, you can create a watercolor painting from an image by simply adding a paintbrush and applying a color to the picture. A three-stage color translation converts the image color and shade to the correct hues of watercolor. At the same time, various brush types with different tip geometries add brush strokes and outline effects to create your own watercolor painting. With a graphic user interface, you can start with a default image or use your own image as a source. Enjoy the smooth and realistic interaction with the picture. With AKVIS Watercolor, you can easily create realistic watercolors without having to learn the complicated process of creating them. The tutorial of this Photoshop filter effects was created by PicNikColor.com. They are a collection of all sorts of free Photoshop filters and resources that will improve your photo editing skills.
