There seems to be a lot of recipes about a one pie, one filling kind of baking. Here is the recipe I have been using, but it sounds like this isn't quite what I'm looking for. A: If you're using a lidded aluminum pie plate, you'll need to make the dough in a lidded bowl. The reason is that aluminum conducts heat away from the pie more rapidly than other metals. If you find that you can't form the crust in the pie plate, get your second pie plate and use it to cook the blueberry filling. Also, just to be clear, you're baking two crusts and filling them from the same pie plate, correct? Observation of a single photon in space using combined on-off detection and time-resolved measurement of photon arrival time.
