stroke engine has been widely used as a power source for an outboard motor. The fuel consumption of the two-stroke engine is approximately twice as high as that of a four-stroke engine. For this reason, a supercharger is mounted to the two-stroke engine to improve the engine power and fuel consumption. The engine power is increased by rotating the crankshaft by way of the supercharger, and the cylinder gas is compressed by using a power source of the supercharger to thereby increase the engine
