The myth of the sane and reasonable person 'Impeach,' but for whom? "A Democracy can survive even the illusion of perfect political leaders, for only a democracy can survive the illusion of perfect political leaders."—Rufus M. Jones Why do we keep sending people like Dick Durbin, Joe Biden, Nancy Pelosi and Chuck Schumer to Congress? You don't have to be a racist to know that electing another party would be a big mistake. Their policies are wrong for the country and we would be better off if they weren't in office. At the very least, the Democrats have proven that they are bad politicians. The impeachment proceedings against President Trump show two things: Democrats are desperate to impeach and they don't really care who is impeached. That's because what they care about is getting Trump out of the White House. Most of the Democrats running for president think they have a chance to win, and their chances depend on the party's voters not caring about who wins the White House. That's why their primary contests are, more often than not, about the future. Their candidates are fighting to define what kind of Democrat a Democrat can be. The Democrat who wins the nomination will likely be the candidate who convinces voters that a Democrat can be "normal." The other example of why Democrats are reluctant to get rid of Trump is that it could inspire the Republicans to win in 2020. They are already planning to run on the success of Trump's presidency. Democrats are worried that a strong Republican showing in 2020 would boost Trump's approval numbers and hurt the chances of their candidate. Democrats have a problem that they have never been able to solve, and their desperation to keep Trump in office and impeach him is the biggest symptom of that problem. They think a strong political leader like President Trump is their best bet for winning in the long term, but they are wrong. At heart, Democrats are revolutionaries who believe in change. So what can we expect from these Democratic candidates? —Amy Klobuchar: First of all, she will never run for president as a Democrat, because
