I was wondering if someone can explain to me what an anchor point is? Is it something you put in a corner where you see the picture and make sure everything else flows from there? And when do you put your anchor point? That is, I've been putting them in where I thought I should. It just looks off to me, and my friends tell me that too. I guess what I'm asking is, what is the purpose of an anchor point? I just want to know where I should put them on the picture.I am trying to install the print driver for HP Officejet 4500 and I get the error message "No printer driver was detected for the specified printer" The printer is connected to the USB port on my laptop, but I also have an attached second USB port. The default Dell printer driver works just fine, so that's not the issue. The printer will print to a USB storage device if one is attached. I have tried a number of drivers from HP, all of which fail with the same error. XP detected this as the HP Officejet 4500 by "magic". It's a very basic driver and it is meant to print to a virtual printer of some sort. When it runs out of memory it will print to a USB thumb drive. Nothing fancy. It's a good driver, but it's very limited. If you want to print something more than the basics, it's best to buy a new print driver from HP. They've done a lot to support Windows 7. Unfortunately I think HP doesn't have a driver for Windows 8 yet, so you'll need to use Windows 7. If you need to print anything more than the basics, I'd buy an HP printer.Clinical features and natural history of neuromyelitis optica. Neuromyelitis optica (NMO) 3e33713323
