Simple Kiosk can turn your computer into a secure Internet kiosk, which can be placed in public places, such as schools and universities, tourist information points, theaters, libraries, and so on. Turn a regular PC into a public Internet kiosk The Internet kiosk makes it possible for users to open specific web pages found in a whitelist while any other websites cannot be launched. This way, the Internet access is restricted, and the range of accessible web pages is narrowed down to sites that help users obtain specific information or interrogate databases. In other words, the entire computer is locked and the terminal can only navigate to specific web pages, preventing unauthorized use. New browser windows cannot be opened, downloads are automatically blocked, and the ALT-F4 key combination is disabled. The task manager cannot be launched either while the application is running. Fullscreen browser with certain restrictions Simple Kiosk consists of a full-screen browser that can only be closed by the system administrator, using a key combination (in this case, CTRL-SHIFT-F4) and a password (by default, this is '12

Simple Kiosk Crack + [Mac/Win]

Simple Kiosk can turn your PC into a fully locked, secure terminal, using restrictions to prevent unauthorized access to the Internet. It can also be used to secure workstations that work with touch screens. In essence, this application is an Internet kiosk program that uses a web browser to display restricted content. It comes with a wide range of customization options, so that you can set up the Internet kiosk to automatically lock itself after a certain period of time or display a specific web page. The interface of the program includes a list of websites that you have the right to access, alongside a list of websites that you cannot access. The list of websites that you have the right to access can be changed according to your preferences. Before using the application, the interface will guide you through a set of easy-to-follow steps. The application will configure itself based on the computer specifications you provide. Then you can launch the application and start using it. How to use: Before you launch the application, you need to set up the URL restrictions you want to use. You can choose from a list of IP addresses, domains or websites that you have the right to access. In order to do this, go to settings, and then to 'Restrictions'. After you have set up the restrictions you want to use, you will need to configure the online privacy settings. This means you will need to select your browser, time settings, and whether or not the application can be disabled when it is opened. After you have finished configuring the settings, you can start the application. When you launch it, you will need to set the password that will allow you to close it down. Once you have set this, the program will close down automatically after a period of time. Note: Currently, Simple Kiosk is only compatible with Windows 7 and 8.
