Associated Factors at a Tertiary-Care Hospital in Mexico. To determine the polypharmacy rate and its associated factors in a geriatric population in a tertiary-care hospital in Mexico. Cross-sectional, observational study of patients over 65 years of age who were admitted at the geriatrics ward of a tertiary-care hospital in Mexico City between January 2014 and December 2015.

Patients were included if they were prescribed ≥ 5 medications and had no previous hospitalization. Demographic and clinical data were collected and the "Drug Therapy Index for Elderly Patients" score was calculated. Descriptive statistics were obtained.

The primary outcomes were the proportion of patients receiving ≥ 5 medications and polypharmacy. Associations between variables and polypharmacy were evaluated using the χ^2 test. Logistic regression was used to identify independent predictors of polypharmacy. One thousand two hundred and forty-nine patients were evaluated. Of these, 63% were women and the mean age was 82.4 years (± 6.3). The prevalence of polypharmacy was 27.4%. The most frequent medications used were antidiabetic agents (54.4%), followed by drugs for obstructive airway disease
