I have checked my email and social media (linked in my store) as I am not sure if they have experienced a spike in sales as well, but they appear to be working fine. I have deleted my Shopify cache and re-pulled it from my Google Apps account. I have checked my billing and Google Ads account, everything seems fine. I have deleted and re-pulled my SSL certificate to make sure that SSL is working fine. I have re-pulled and re-installed the Shopify app for Android and iOS devices. All of this has not resolved the issue. It's working fine online, but when I go to the shop, I get that error. What else can I do? A: According to Shopify support team, the issue has been resolved and related to the "Updated iOS 11 and iOS 11.1 beta update, which causes SSL issues". I would advise that as a temporary solution you can switch to using a non-SSL version of your Shopify website, is fine - but you need to ensure you don't accidentally login to your store from a different secure connection such as a webpage and not your browser. It is not necessary for you to use SSL, but as this is a server side issue I wouldn't recommend you switch over until the issue is resolved. Can marathon swimmer Greta Guldbrandt do it? She posted this picture on Facebook with the caption: "33 hours with the sun in my eyes - tomorrow I run a marathon!" "What if we all fall in the water and sink? How deep do you think it is? We can save each other!" Guldbrandt writes on Facebook in a post. Greta 'I was strong enough' Greta chose to swim over riding the bike because she wanted to test herself. "My legs were so tired, that I couldn't stand it any longer," she writes
