I have tried it a couple of times in the past and there is a serious flaw in the way it operates. If two videos have a similar beginning and end time the software will get confused and convert both videos at the same time. This is more annoying than anything, especially if you are trying to join two videos and create a new one. Could it not have a menu for putting the start and end time of each file and let you put a unique time to each video? James Oct 10, 2009 I think the video editor is great. I can do the conversion and the cut options. One problem is the video converter. The first time I use it, the video converter crashes. It doesn't work if I try to save the video to my harddrive. It asks if I want to save the file without the converter, but it comes up with an error every time I try to do that. The time adjustment is buggy as well. I tried to trim the videos by putting in 45 seconds, but it says that the clip is blank. Chris Oct 10, 2009 I appreciate this software very much. The video editor is extremely good. I don't understand how the video converter is unable to handle video files from a camera. Did they change something in the way it works? Polly Oct 11, 2009 I really appreciate this software and I use it daily on my Windows XP laptop computer to convert videos from my Windows Media 7 DVD Player. There is a demo version and it works well so I bought the actual version. I do have some suggestions. There are times where the video converter freezes. When that happens, I have to close it out and open it again. Another thing I dislike is the video editor. What I need from this software is to be able to allow me to make multiple
