Another really neat tool is called Picasafari ($8), a simple to use screen capture capture software. It was developed to help you to document screen activities while you're watching a movie. The application has a clean and simple interface with a single toolbar that contains the tools you'll need to get started. All actions are well labeled and each one of them is displayed in a different tab. The default options are not too complicated and it usually lets you capture a still frame image after every one-second interval. You can play a movie, save it as a video file, choose a certain area to be recorded, or you can just use a predefined area (e.g. the desktop). The recording process begins once you press the 'Record' button. You will be asked for the output file type and the directory where the recording should be saved. There are two choices for the output format, namely AVI and MPEG. The MP4 format is not offered as a choice and you get more control over your video file. You can edit the recorded material and choose from several effects. What's more, you can drag-and-drop to add objects or make the system play a sound. Are you tired of using a regular camera to take pictures of your favorite movies and TV shows? Just install this $

The process is fairly simple, and an online tutorial is there to provide you with a few pointers, which are quite handy and do not require the program to be downloaded. What we didn't like so much is that this program is cross-platform, which means that it will work on both Windows 7 and 8 PCs. Technically, the screen-wallpapers are really good, with sharp and pleasant designs.

Conclusion Visual Allure Creator is very easy to use, and it may very well help you design your desktop wallpapers right away. Skinsaholic is a simple yet helpful free tool that you can use in order to take the cover and titlebars of your favorite
