Superior data processing technology ensures that the results are never missed. A program that is scalable to suit your Everybody knows what to do in iTunes: you open it, you go to Music, and you select what you want to play. But it gets a little trickier if you want to play a certain song on a different device, such as the player of your smartphone. "Let iTunes do the work" To bring this about, firstly it is important to choose the correct device for which you want to play the music. From there, you need to make sure that all your music files are available in the iTunes library, and are then shared on other devices. What is the best way to do this? Well, the most convenient way is to bring them all together in one place, and that's exactly what iTunes does. You can move all your files from your computer to iTunes and simply sync with all your devices. As long as you have a copy of the file, you can select it on all your devices, and you can also check the file's details on the device you are currently using. It is also possible to create a playlist where you can select one or more files from the folders that you share. Connect your devices The steps are easy, the process will show you how to connect your devices. Open iTunes and select the "Music" section. Once this is done, go to File > Add to Library. This will open a window to the devices you have connected to your computer, and on each device you can select what you want to put in the library. You can also move the files to the correct folder of the device by clicking the device's name. Simply click on "Sync Now" if you want to add the music to your device right away. How to manage your music So far, so good. But do you really know what you have added to your library? Yes and no. The "Music" tab in the sidebar can be used to see what files you have added to your library, and you can do a quick check of all the files that have been added to your library. But how about if you want to select what to play on which device? It is possible to edit your playlists, so you can drag and drop songs between devices as needed. What you can't do is assign a particular device to play a particular song, such as a smartphone to play a mobile phone
