NAMC YRT carries over 20 million passengers per year, but only carries a 10% share of the market. Korean Air offered to buy an 80% stake in NAMC YRT, which would have doubled the value of the company, according to the New York Times. But the deal fell apart due to the two airlines not getting along. Chinese and Korean airlines are major buyers of aviation fuel in Southeast Asia. The state-owned airline of the Republic of Korea, Korean Air, is in a battle to become Southeast Asia's largest airline. Most recently, it has been in the news for offering the US president, Donald Trump, a free trip to South Korea in return for praising the South Korean government's efforts in the ongoing trade war between the US and South Korea. The US President praised the Korean Air executives and even personally congratulated the airline on its purchase of a 10% stake in Vietnam's largest airline, Vietnam Airlines (VNA). However, the deal never materialized and never was completed. Why did this deal fall apart? According to the New York Times, the two airlines have been at loggerheads since 2012, when the deal was first announced. It seems the US airlines have not been satisfied with the terms Korean Air has offered, and Korean Air has been unhappy with the restrictions on what they can do with their planes. The problem is that a few years ago, Korean Air bought 90% of the shares of NAMC YRT, which was then the largest airline in Vietnam. Now, Korean Air is reportedly trying to buy back more shares so it can have a bigger share, as the airline has not been satisfied with the terms it has been given. However, the Vietnamese government has sought to block
