You need to look at the information you are trying to store in a database and decide how you are going to represent it. This can be in a database table, a linked list or in whatever format you require. This is a very broad question but the basic principle you are looking at is to decide whether you want to use some kind of database (probably SQL Server) or write the data to a file. In the first case you might need to design a database schema, but in the second you just need to write the data in the appropriate format. For
