Bluetooth Dfu Image File

---

Secure Boot means that a signature is attached to the firmware image (.s37) before it is packaged into a formal update file (.gbl). Note that this is different from .bin, .iso, or .zip firmware images, which in the case of Windows are legitimate only if their signatures have been properly signed. In practice, Secure Boot is not usually used, but this feature may be required if you have Windows Server 2008 R2 on which you want to install Windows 8 (for example, to work with Windows 8 RTM). In the case of Windows 7, it is not required.
