OBS Advantage - Live Mapping Software OBS Advantage gives you the power to create professional live maps in minutes! No WMS, No PostGIS, No MapServer, No PostgreSQL, No DB2, No Matlab or any other software you need to get going. Using the info from this page, I managed to create a Perl script that will display the max mouse pointer speed detected on the local system, and the graphics card's max Video RAM. The Perl script is written for Windows OS, but should be relatively easy to port to all other platforms. If you find any errors, or have any suggestions, please PM me. Did you notice anything wrong with the code? If you want to see some changes, I also have a general idea of how to compress the functions and clean up the code. But this would probably be better posted on the Perl mailing list. Hi I have created a Perl script that prints one line of text by scrolling a vertical line in the corner of the screen. You can play with the script just by typing commands at the command prompt. The script works like this: ./spillline | perl -ne 'print "\e[8m". $1. "\e[K" | sed -e '1s/ //g' The script is still in development, so you will likely have to work on it before printing in error, but I think the principles are self-explanatory. Conventionally, it has been typical to manage the operation of the engine of a vehicle by transmitting/receiving signals between a main microcomputer that is provided in the engine and a sub-microcomputer that is provided in a controller such as the transmission, and the like, which are connected to a microcomputer provided in an ECU (electronic control unit), to manage fuel injection, ignition, and the like. That is, by communicating with each other, the microcomputer of the controller can be operated by the CPU of the engine microcomputer, and thus a process of control is performed. The engine microcomputer sets an initial value for an operation time with reference to a predetermined program such as a program stored in an EEPROM (Electrically Erasable Programmable ROM), or the like, in accordance with a state of the vehicle after a start of the engine, and calculates a basic quantity of control such as fuel injection amount or ignition timing on the basis of the operation time. The controller microcomputer performs an interruption processing of the CPU of the engine microcomputer in accordance with the result of an interruption processing of each interruption processing of an interrupt signal from an external unit such as a CPU of a vehicle control unit, a microcomputer, a sub-computer, and the like. In the case where the engine
