The integrity of the microvascular barrier, and hence, the maintenance of lung function are crucial for survival. In this study, we attempted to delineate the potential role of protease-activated receptor-2 (PAR-2) in the regulation of barrier function in the early stages of acute lung injury. Using immunohistochemistry, we analyzed the expression of PAR-2 in the rat lung after induction of lung injury. PAR-2 was highly expressed in the cytoplasm of microvascular endothelial cells in the lungs of healthy animals. Ischemia reperfusion (IR) of the lungs induced a marked increase in PAR-2 expression. Western blot analysis showed a significant increase in PAR-2 expression in protein extracts from IR lung endothelium at 3h after IR, whereas PAR-2 mRNA expression was increased at 1h after IR. In addition, Western blot analysis of protein extracts from IR lung endothelium showed a significant increase in the activation of extracellular signal-regulated kinases 1/2 (ERK-1/2) at 1h after IR. To elucidate the role of PAR-2 in the regulation of barrier function, we transiently transfected a dominant-negative mutant of PAR-2 (dnPAR-2) into the human microvascular endothelial cell line HMEC-1. The inhibitory effect of dnPAR-2 was more
