- UNISYS GAYAGA is a commercial translation and localization software application (available for Windows and Macintosh platforms). - It is integrated with BLUEBILITY® Translation Server (its platform) and Translation Memory management (its infrastructure). - GAYAGA Translation Memory Management Service runs on UNISYS iSeries servers. - GAYAGA is available for UNISYS iSeries as a part of Translation Memory Management solution. - The user can add texts and phrases to the GAYAGA TMMS in several ways, including by selecting and importing.php files (to search the web), by manually entering phrases in the TMMS or by simply typing out the text. - One or more machines are connected to the UNISYS TMMS for automatic translation, and a worklist is then built up from the un-translated texts. - The user can then view the worklist, make language changes or submit the translation request to the BLUEBILITY® Translation Server for translation. - The translations are collected on the BLUEBILITY® Translation Server in XML format. - After translation and checks are passed, the software automatically imports the translated text into the TMMS, and the worklist is updated. - GAYAGA is distributed through the Internet and can thus be used and supplied to a broad audience. GAYAGA Features: - TRANSLATE: Real time text translation functionality - MANAGE: Translation Memory Management Service and UNISYS TMMS - ADD: Ability to import and export text - IMAGE: PDF and PNG image format support Download: - For Windows: - For Macintosh: How to Install: - On Windows platform, UNISYS iSeries is required. GAYAGA works only in UNISYS iSeries TMS-7202 or later. - Install the program to UNISYS iSeries servers (working) Download:

time. This is a user friendly application, designed to make your job of translating in a very easy way. State Sen. Janet Howell (D-Inglewood) announced a bill Thursday that would help the Los Angeles Police Department implement a technological tool to help solve crimes. The bill would allow an LAPD officer to record video with a mobile device and allow the video to be stored by the department, which can then release the video to the public if charges are filed. The bill was introduced at the request of the LAPD, according to Los Angeles Police Chief Charlie Beck. "This could be used by our officers to identify a crime that they may have witnessed or become involved with," Beck told the Los Angeles Times. "Currently, we do a terrible job keeping records. We are going to have literally thousands of cases where eyewitnesses are not interviewed or recorded," Beck said, according to the Times. "We are not as good at identifying a crime as we need to be." The bill also allows the police department to retain ownership of the video recordings and is signed into law by the governor. It does not create a new state law or amend the state's Electronic Communications Privacy Act. Assemblyman Eduardo Garcia (D-Coachella) said the bill is needed because the LAPD's Department of Technology and Communications is "non-existent." "It's hard to imagine that the department doesn't have the technology it needs to keep the public safe," Garcia said in a statement to the Times. "If the department says it doesn't have the technology, that's an excellent reason to provide it." The bill was introduced by Howell, who is also an Inglewood City Council member.

Q: Finding a software that has data pattern in it Is there a software that has and displays data pattern like nested objects in it? This software should be free for commercial use? A: I've used Sigil once. But for a free one which can be used for commercial use,
