When you've hit a wall and you simply can't figure it out, well the answer is, you don't know any more than when you started. That is, you don't know enough to figure it out. The important thing to realise in this case is, as you face the wall or intellectual block, realise that it is only your self-assured idea of the answer that is blocking you. The truth is, you don't know. Your brain probably knows the answer but it's telling you that you don't know. Really, you don't know. That's all there is to it. So then you start asking yourself what is this question? What does it look like? It could be anything. Maybe it's "Why is time passing"? Maybe it's "Why is there a big red button on the spaceship"? Maybe it's "Why are 3e33713323
