`java.beans.PropertyChangeSupport` - description A base class for notifying observers of a property. In the JavaBeans Architecture, a property is a "private" variable that holds a value, such as the state of a checkbox or the print settings of a `PrintDocument`. A

`PropertyChange Support` object, for example, can be registered as an observer for a property, and then a change in the value of the property will signal this observer object. When the property is later changed, the observer will be automatically notified of the new value. The JavaBeans API was incorporated into the J2SE API in version 1.3. Many of the low-level classes in the original JavaBeans API were made public in the J2SE API. These classes, which are now part of the basic packages, are now known as the low-level standard classes and may be used in any context. You can also use the new classes to extend and/or enhance the capabilities of the Java language and the Java runtime environment. The following new classes are among those that are part of the low-level standard classes:
