A: As you're using a product key and have activated it, you can use that product key to reactivate. But unfortunately, you'll have to email Microsoft support to obtain that key. If you don't have that key, or if you just want to take your chances and try to reactivate without a product key, don't use the method below. I have seen this work in the past, but I have no idea if it will work today, because this is a long standing bug in SLU. If you try to reactivate without the product key, you'll be prompted with the standard "is it ok to activate on this system?" popup. You can probably skip past that, but you'll need to wait around for a bit for the update to complete. It doesn't really matter what specific menu item you use to reactivate Windows, but if you don't pass the activation, you'll need to reinstall Windows, which is a pain in the butt. When you first got your Windows 8.1 Phone Activation, you were given a code to reinstall without needing a product key, this feature did not apply to Windows 10. There is only one way to install Windows 10 in the Windows Store, and you can't change it. 1.) Go to this page 2.) Download the Windows 10 ISO. The windows 10 iso is not a Live-CD, it is an installation media with a full Windows 10 install on it. This means that at the end of the installation, if you have not chosen the option to allow Cortana, Windows Store, or anything else that requires activation, you won't be able to activate it. If you have these "flags" enabled, the installer will install and set up just fine. 3.) When Windows 10 installs, it should ask you a question about activation, select your country and select to activate. 4.) After Windows 10 installs, it will need to restart. When you start again, Windows should activate normally. If it doesn't, you can follow the instructions below. But you need to make sure that after the Windows 10 install, if you have not chosen one of the above 3 things (Cortana, Windows Store, etc...) that require an Activation, the installer is not able to activate the install. Once you've activated Windows, and are installing apps from the 1cb139a0ed
