If you have any questions, please use our forum: ChefMoMire - A Chatroom (AND a Proxy) - FREE So I finally started developing a Chatroom application for my site, but the Chatroom I made is a little bit different. This one is for the user to visit the site, enter a nickname, and start chatting with other users. However, my site isn't a social networking site (which is a site where people enter their info and search for someone of the same name) but rather a humor site with a strong community. I have only allowed guests to enter my site because I thought that was the way to go. Also, this app is not a social network where people share photos and such. It's simply a place where people can go and share jokes. But now that I have a free chat

Screenshots: Sunday, April 2, 2011 The Descendants of the Goddess (The Beginning) The first words that I posted on this blog were (and I'm putting them here for the first time) "The Descendants of the Goddess" after reading an article by Dee-Ann Durbin in The Threshing Floor. Well, what can I say? I thought they were amazing words, and we all know how brilliant Dee-Ann's writing is, so here is the original post. The Descendants of the Goddess by Dee-Ann Durbin A few days ago, I was asked by a good friend of mine what my name means. I thought that she would be talking about me, but she was talking about a friend of hers. And I thought to myself, "Well, it's probably a family name or nickname or something." That didn't seem like a big deal. But as I was thinking about it, I realized that she was right. This wasn't a big deal, but it was because of the word "descend". My name means, "descendants of the goddess." Why would the names that I had been given so far ever mean anything like this? If my name meant nothing, then why did my parents name me? My mother was very specific about this. I was named Phoebe after Phoebe, one of my favorite goddesses. She called me Phoebe because I was a "light-bringer". I was born when she was very pregnant, and she was having a lot of difficulty carrying me. She said that she was trying to carry me and that she was not strong enough. When she was in the store buying clothes, she was looking at a bunch of "don't wear that" shirts. The ones that she wanted to buy were all hanging in the window. When she went in to look at them, one said "Don't wear it, it won't fit you." She said, "Phoebe, you are not heavy, you are light
