What is Photoshop? Adobe Photoshop is a vector-based image-editing program—that is, a program designed to use vectors instead of pixels to create images. This is opposed to a raster-based image editor like CorelDraw. This type of software tends to be used more by home users because of its flexibility but is often prohibitively expensive for a professional. Photoshop is both a proprietary and free program. The free program has its place, but the largest share of the market is for the Adobe Photoshop Suite, which includes Photoshop, Lightroom, and the program's printer. The current version of the Suite is Photoshop CC (version 2017), Lightroom CC, and Adobe Print Studio. However, Adobe has recently released Photoshop Elements, which is an entirely free imaging program—great for beginners. Despite the name, the program doesn't restrict users from using the tool's functions. Besides the CorelDraw image-editing program, Photoshop is the most popular graphic-design tool on the market. Its myriad features allow a designer to work with virtually any image and also includes advanced prepress features that help print production. It is often sold as the primary way to create a printed piece. This program is designed primarily for a professional workflow. It is a great tool for building websites. The tool is a bit hard to learn, and best-of-breed tutorials are relatively pricey. If you can afford to use this program, it is great, but learning it effectively requires some patience. Temporal dynamics of a reaction-diffusion model for neural field responses. We study the temporal evolution of a neural field response model describing the dynamics of the neural field potential caused by the interaction of distributed neuronal populations and their axons in the brain. We include a spatially constant external stimulus, as well as a diffusing stimulus, and take into account the physical properties of the medium where the axons of the neurons are embedded. This modelling approach provides a description of the propagation of stimulus-induced field potentials in the cortex and the thalamus. This framework is used to characterize different stimulus conditions and to assess the impact of the changing inter-neuronal and axonal distances. Q: change upload input type 'file' to 'text' my question is: is there a way to change this file input with a text input, please? I don't know if this is the right place for that... They may be described as comprising long chains of partially condensed monomeric units linked by internal unsaturations in polymer chains. The general structural formula of a typical homopolymer of ethylene would be written as $C_{2n}H_{4n-2}$. The general structural formula of a typical copolymer of ethylene and another monoolefin is typically $C_{2n}H_{4n-2}$ (co-ethylene). where n is an integer of
