Image Credit -: brandQ: How to create a new Swift class based on existing classes? There are plenty of ways of creating a subclass of a Swift class, but is there any technique for "generating" a new Swift class that is a subclass of an existing class? For example, I have an existing class named BaseViewController, and I'd like to generate a class for use in my app with the exact same behavior as BaseViewController, except that it would always create a table view in the view. A: Yes, there is a way to do this, and it's very simple. You will have to name the class the same as the class you want to inherit from (e.g. BaseViewController), and then change the superclass at the beginning of the file where you want the superclass to extend: `class GeneratedViewController: BaseViewController { override func viewDidLoad() { super.viewDidLoad() } }` If you want the new class to inherit from other classes, you can also add them before doing this override: `class GeneratedViewController: BaseViewController, UITableViewDataSource { // Custom code }` But if you only want to make a very specific subclass with similar properties, it's best to stick with using inheritance, you get some additional ideas and advice from the top website designers and developers. A few tips before the most important aspect of your website – design. When you hire website designers, you could ask about their personal and work experiences, and their portfolio. Find out all the important details about the company and website you're planning to work with. Check if they have the experience you need. When choosing website designers and developers, your main mission is to ensure the website you want to create is unique and everything you want it to be. This may be easier than you think as web designers and developers in Doha are all over the world and they are all capable of giving their best. Whatever type of website you are planning to create, you need to choose a company that has the required experience. If your website's design is complicated and requires a web designer, you need to look for a company that has the required experience and the ability to deliver. Check if they have the necessary experience required.
