testing migration commands in Laravel I am writing unit test for my migration command (used for adding and deleting records), which will be invoked from artisan command, and I am stuck in testing migration execution. Question: How can I mock/stub/fake migration command from test class and use it to carry out some mock operations? As far as I have read, artisan calls its command class from its global container to execute its method, so I am not sure how to mock this method (in order to carry out operations). My migration class
