Q: What is the correct way to implement custom authentication method in Django? What is the correct way to implement custom authentication method in Django? I'm trying to authenticate user via JSON authentication cookie. I've got that part working, and I've got the cookie written into local storage. However, my issue is that it keeps redirecting me to the /login page if I attempt to login via the login view. How do I fix this so that it will authenticate properly and redirect to a different view once authenticated? Here is the code for my login view: def login(request): """ Authenticate user with provided credentials and create or update auth cookie """ login_name = request.POST['username'] login_password = request.POST['password'] if not login_name or not login_password: return HttpResponseRedirect("/login") user = authenticate(request, login_name, login_password) if user is not None and user.is_active: if user.is_authenticated: user = authenticate(request) if user is None: return HttpResponseRedirect("/login") login(request, user) context = {} context['login_name'] = login_name context['login_password'] = login_password context['user'] = user return render_to_resp(request=request, template=LOGIN_TEMPLATE) Here is my localhost/login/ URL: Login Page
