#1: Select or Add Similar Pixels with the Spot Healing Brush Photoshop has many different tools to edit a photo, but the Spot Healing Brush is considered the easiest and most common method for making changes. Start by selecting the spot that needs some work with the Spot Healing Brush. The size of the brush can be set as large as you want, but smaller sizes may be easier to use to remove minor blemishes in a photo. To add similar pixels to a photo, just click on an area that needs more pixels. The Spot Healing Brush makes it easier to edit parts of a photo to improve visibility or contrast. The brush has a variety of useful presets for common tasks, such as fixing harsh shadows, removing dust spots, correcting exposure problems, and softening skin. If you want to remove all the black spots from a photo you could use the Spot Healing Brush to remove the black points on a photo. #2: Create a Simple Layer Using Layer Masks The simple and quick way to add a new background to a photo is to use Layer Masks. One of the most basic types of layers is a Layer Mask. Layer masks can be used to control the look of a specific part of a photograph. The Layer Mask works with Photoshop's layer system to apply only the color or lightness/darkness of the area you have selected. You can use the Quick Mask tool to quickly add a Layer Mask to an area of a photo. Layer Masks are incredibly versatile. They can alter the look of a single layer, or be used to apply a filter to an entire photo. #3: Create a Layer Mask Using the Quick Mask Tool Layer masks can be used to control the look of a single layer, or can be used to filter a photo as a whole. For example, to apply a soft focus effect to a photo you could use the Quick Mask tool to create a mask from one of the background layers, and the mask could be saved for later use. When you select the Quick Mask tool you can choose an area of a photo to make a mask. Just click and hold on the area you want to mask and then drag outward to mask the desired area. The Quick Mask tool can be used to create a mask to isolate a specific section of an image. #4: Remove Defects Using the Clone Stamp Tool To remove a defect in an

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image heating apparatus such as a fixing apparatus for fixing a toner image of an image forming apparatus on a paper sheet, and an image forming apparatus equipped with the image heating apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art A typical conventional image heating apparatus includes a heat roller having a heater therein and a pressurizing roller for pressing the heat roller against a paper sheet bearing a unfixed toner image. A heater power supply contacts an end of the pressurizing roller and a pressurizing shaft, which connects the end of the pressurizing roller and the heater power supply, is supported by a pressurizing shaft supporting member and an end of the pressurizing shaft is supported at an end of an elastic member. To prevent the heat roller and the pressurizing roller from being worn, a temperature of the pressurizing roller is kept lower than a temperature of the heat roller. However, when the elastic member has a portion, which is strongly heated by the heater, it may stick to a contact surface of the pressurizing roller. Japanese Laid-Open Patent Publication No. 2010-119597 discloses a structure in which the pressurizing shaft supporting member is fabricated of a thermal conductor having a larger thermal capacity than the pressurizing shaft, thereby reducing the temperature rise of the pressurizing shaft. Diverse relationships among correlated emotion reports: reliability and validity. This study used the Self-assessment Manikin to investigate the psychometric properties of diverse types of ratings from a set of emotion reports concerning well-defined stimuli, (i.e., Rated-Raters), and of a set of self-reports reported by (i) the emotion targets themselves, (Self-Raters). Results showed that different types of reports and self-reports were correlated in different ways and reflected different aspects of the reported emotion. For the majority of reported emotions, ratings from at least two sources were highly inter-correlated. The report of an emotion was also related to the intensity with which it was reported by targets themselves. However, in case of a few emotion categories, the data suggested that the target's intensity might be linked to the arousal with which the stimulus was reported, rather than with the target's subjective judgment of the reported emotion. The validity of the ratings was also demonstrated by corresponding correlations to performance on a
