General one-pot synthesis of dendrimeric and hyperbranched poly(amino acids) and their application in cell bioassays. This work presents a facile and general strategy for the synthesis of a series of functionalized poly(amino acids) (PAA) dendrimer with up to 60 dendritic generations and hyperbranched poly(amino acids) (HPAAs) using one-pot methods. These materials were characterized by NMR, MALDI-TOF MS, and FTIR. Their cytotoxicity against HepG2 cells was evaluated by a MTT assay in comparison with poly(lactic-co-glycolic acid) (PLGA) nanoparticles as positive controls. The comparison between PAA with various generations showed that the dendritic structure of PAA exerted a lower cytotoxicity than those of HPAAs and PLGA nanoparticles. Furthermore, the hyperbranched structure possessed lower cytotoxicity than PAA. The most cytotoxic PAA was with the generation 3 dendritic structure. The dendritic structure of PAA showed lower cytotoxicity compared with that of the hyperbranched structure of HPAAs, indicating that the addition of branching points into PAA-like structures may inhibit the cytotoxicity of PAA. It also indicates that the addition of branching points and generation numbers may influence the cytotoxicity of PAA. The present invention relates to an oil concentration detecting method for a crankcase of an internal combustion engine, and more particularly, to an oil concentration detecting method for a crankcase which is applied to an internal combustion engine provided with a hydraulic oil supply mechanism and a hydraulic oil drain mechanism in addition to the crankcase. In an internal combustion engine such as a gasoline engine, a diesel engine, a lean burn engine or a natural gas engine, a lubricating oil is supplied to sliding parts and a bearing which are in a state of sliding with respect to a crankshaft. The oil is indispensable for a smooth movement of the sliding parts and the bearing. When the oil is consumed, the lubricating property is degraded and a lubricating oil flow through the sliding parts and the bearing is reduced. In a middle period where the oil is in a short supply, a predetermined amount of oil is supplied to the engine only by a small pump by the use of an oil pan. Therefore, a pressure of the oil in the engine becomes lower than a pressure obtained when

To use the Clone Stamp, click inside the desired area, activate the Clone Stamp tool with the E key, and select the area you wish to clone. Click Clone from the Clone Stamp tool options menu. With the Clone Stamp tool's Protect option disabled, click to select the area you wish to clone. The Clone Stamp's brush size and opacity determine how much of the area you are replicating. Drag the cursor over the area you wish to clone. If you want to retain information from the area you are cloning, make sure the Protect option is on. The Clone Stamp is also used to correct lens flares and other distortions caused by camera lens reflections. To repair lens flares, click inside the image to activate the Clone Stamp, select the flares, and click Clone. If a Clone Stamp tool is selected, the tools menu that displays will have a Protect menu. Make sure the Protect checkbox is on. Click the ellipse in the lower right corner of the Clone Stamp tool options menu to disable Protect. Click on the ellipse again to enable it. 6 77
