The issue is that I can't use the document.ready function to do this because this is inside a modal box, the modal box is loaded dynamically from an ajax call. I'm thinking the best way is to use this: $("question_block").click(function(){ $(this).hide(2000); }); But I can't make this work. A: In the click event, you can pass a function reference as a parameter, which will hide all other elements on the page. $("question_block").click(function(e){ e.preventDefault(); // prevents the link to change $("question_block").not(this).hide(); // hides all but the target element }); To stop the link jumping to another page, you can either: return false from the event handler: $("question_block").click(function(e){ e.prevent
