The Emotional Ladder of Forms By Jim Pohlson One of the reasons that Ozko's wide varieties of Emotional Exercises have been so popular for more than 50 years is that they provide immediate emotional change to people at all levels of consciousness. But we've found that people don't immediately use the exercises to change what they do. It's that barrier to transformation that we addressed with our Secondary and Inversion processes. One of the keys to our process of transformation is the transformation ladder. The Emotional Ladder of Forms helps people work through the impediments that block their emotional growth. The Results Research shows that the emotional ladder of forms and the process of deliberate practice has immediate impact on people's emotional lives. People can experience the new emotional states with the emotional ladder of forms.

People can experience the new emotional states without the emotional ladder of forms. A research study with a 5th grade class, clearly showed the benefits of an inversion process. G "The results are dazzling! I'm particularly excited about the emotional ladder of forms. I think this program could serve as the basis for my teaching about emotions." -Maria, Teacher E "I have experienced a radical shift in a few weeks and believe that I have learned much in regards to my own emotions. Over my entire life I have gone through so many different processes but this one has done the most for me. I have learned how not to block myself and am now seeing what I am capable of." -Nancy, Esthetician Y

"Ozko's Emotional Ladder of Forms is definitely changing my outlook on my work,

Version of a C++ Boost library that is dependent on a specific version of gcc I am using the Boost Library in a software project built with gcc 4.8.4 on OSX 10.9, which is to be compiled for both Windows and OSX. As I understand, different versions of gcc have different bug behavior when handling different versions of C++. If so, how can I use a version of the Boost libraries that is compatible with a specific version of gcc? A: On the Apple packaging system, there's a slight difference between `x.y.z` and `x.y.z.apple`. If you use a specific release of a package (`4.6.3-osx-x86_64.pkg` for `gcc 4.6.3` on `OSX 10.9`), you can get version-pinning to work.

Typically, you would just install the specific package version. In the case of `boost`, there is no specific package version of `boost`, so you should just install the `boost-latest` tarball for `gcc 4.8`. I think you can force the `x.y.z.xxx.pkg` version to be installed by passing the `-v` (or `--version`) option to the package installer, but I can't verify if this works. What are the
