How to crack a CASIO Classpad 30 Emulator and save Serial Key... Yobat.... January 28, 2021 at 3:16 pm . . Reply.
@SAShara_ Ends up here all the time. I have a similar problem and I think its because of this piece of code: if (!$column['has_archive'] == 0 || $column['has_archive']==1) { $description = substr($description, 0, 44); $description.= '...'; } I think I need to convert $column['has_archive'] to boolean and it's like this: $column['has_archive'] == 1 I have only one word archive on the website so I probably need to change it to: $column['has_archive'] == 1 && $column['column'] == 'home' But I have no idea how to write it. Any help would be appreciated, many thanks Addendum The number one of search results on Google is actually a duplicate of this question. I have already read it in full, but I am adding my answer in case it helps the rest of the people with similar problems. I have multiple tables where data is indexed by condition that is not equal to one or 0. And when searching in google I always see the same code being used. A: Try changing your code to the following: if (!$column['has_archive'] == 0) { $description = substr($description, 0, 44); $description.= '...'; } Q: If 2 positive numbers have same difference, they are equal I came across this question Two positive numbers $x$ and $y$ have the same difference (so $|x
- y|$) if and only if $x = y$. I don't know if this is a true statement, but did not find a counterexample. A: Hint: If $x = y$, then
$|x-y| = |y-x|=0$ and this implies both $x,y$ are equal. Trichodesmium erythraeum is a nitrogen fixing unicellular eukaryotic
