I didnt even know whether to apply for the $22,000 loss death benefit, but now I'm thinking I may not get it? Most older people would say that if there was any chance you had to sign off for an administration charge it was not worthwhile applying. I am out of the office next week and am not coming back until 14 September. I will be out of the office for four days next week. If it is going to take that long will it be enough to make you want to sign off and make this thing go away? Hi scottybee. I don't have any advice as I didn't know much about the law to be honest, but an "Administration Charge" should be around £100.00, if I remember rightly. I assume that you are worried you will be charged £22,000.00 in admin fees and that is why you are asking. Do you have a case worker? If not, perhaps you need to speak to the benefits office (maybe ask them to write to your case worker to advise you) and they will be able to look after the claim process for you. Ask the benefits office to enclose a copy of our letter with your second tier processing request. If they don't send it I would file a request with the highest level appeals office (the Employment Tribunal) to ask them to send our letter on the evidence it is based on. I have been checking with other people who were long term unemployed and are now being assessed and the reasons they were not able to claim before are because they were told the £22,000.00 admin charge is a normal added on. If I can find out whether you get the £22,000.00 admin charge and if you don't I'll let you know. 570a42141b
