A novel class of squaraine compounds containing azo linkages (Sw-Azo-Sq) was designed and synthesized. As revealed by the absorption and fluorescence spectra, the Sw-Azo-Sq compound is a strong green emitter with an emission maximum at 500 nm in both the excited state and in the ground state. The fluorescence quantum yield of the azo bond is less than 20% in the ground state while it is nearly 76% in the azo bond excited state. Electronic structures, fluorescence decay times and molecular dynamics simulations of the ground and excited states were investigated in detail. The predicted fluorescence quantum yields from the CASPT2/6-31G theory are 0.01 and 0.64 in the ground and excited states, respectively, which is in good agreement with the experimental values. In addition, the electronic absorption spectra of the Sw-Azo-Sq compounds are found to be completely different from the case of unsubstituted squaraine compounds, and the same holds for their fluorescence spectra. It is considered that the presence of the azo linkage in the excited state causes the changes in the electronic absorption spectrum, molecular conformation, and fluorescence spectrum.Q: Regex.Find() can't find pattern using.net 4.0?
