By using a detailed analysis of the long-range Coulomb interactions, we construct a variational ground state for a wide class of systems with a long-range potential under certain conditions on the properties of the potential. This class of systems includes hard-core ionic liquids, semi-free quasicrystals, and a wide variety of charged colloids and polyelectrolytes. We predict phase transitions from a disordered fluid to a (quasi-)crystal at a critical density. For quasiperiodic potentials, we obtain the structure factor and show that it differs from the one of a quasicrystal. An interesting set of universal limits for the lowest-energy structure factor and structural order parameter is derived.Perceived frequency of occurrence of traumatic events and subsequent posttraumatic stress disorder in Chinese college students: the role of fear of crime. Fear of crime has been considered to be a predictor for posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD). The present study explores the relationship between perceived frequency of occurrence of traumatic events and PTSD in Chinese college students.
