Q: Why is this page not displaying? The live version of keeps giving me an error. I know this is a common site issue, and some of the other people who have posted about it are having the same problem. I'm thinking it may be a DNS issue. The LAN ip address is: 127.0.0.1. Can I manually map the server to the LAN ip address?

A: Okay, I fixed it. It seems the primary dns server hadn't been updated for a while. So I changed the dns server in the router to the local one and it works great.

Currently, we use the external IP provided by our network (that's in a different network), and when we try to connect using the IP provided by the network, everything works just fine. I want to configure my server so that I can connect to it through the Ip from the network, because it's going to be much easier to use. I already tried to change the ip address at "Network and Sharing Center\Network Connections" and in "c:\windows\system32\drivers\etc\hosts", but it doesn't work. Does anyone have any other idea that could help me with this? A: In Windows, you need to disable the loopback address, to make sure that the private IP can't be used as a public IP. Open the command prompt, type in the following commands: netsh interface ipv4 netsh interface ipv6 Then press Enter to enable your private IP. 5 , - 1 , 2 , 5 F a c t o r c * * 2 / 3 + 1 0 0 6 8 * c + 1 5 1 5 1 4 5 4 4 .
