"In-game animations are things like the way a defender tackles or a ball flying into the air reacts. Making the in-game animations match how the real footballers play is a big part of creating an authentic game." "In the past, our efforts have mainly focused on player skill detection and behavioural recognition for the Player Impact Engine. Now, we can finally use in-game data and motion capture data to do a better job of recognizing how to move and react on the pitch and how to tackle a player. Our objective was to match the real-life football match as best as we can." Further information on FIFA 22's major features can be found at fifa.com/fifa22. A: You can add a custom field to your wp_query object. When using the WordPress' main query you can do so like so: $args_query = array('post_type' => 'post', 'posts_per_page' => 50, 'orderby' => 'post_date', 'meta_key' => 'ft_video', //You can change this to whatever you need. 'orderby' => 'meta_value', 'meta_query' => array(array('key' => 'ft_video', //Change this to be your own custom field key 'value' => '1245' //Change this to be the key and value you want to use))); $q = new WP_Query($args_query); The advantage of this is that it can be automated. So you wouldn't need to keep manually adding a custom field on every single query (which it sounds like you are doing). You would then just need to get get the value you want to be different for every loop
