A: Well, It looks like the file was corrupted, because it has 1.2GB and no tags, so I'll leave the answer here for those having the same problem. Q: When I run my program, it stores data into a pointer and then I try to print the pointer's information but it can't print anything and it says 'newCharPointer(...).getData(): attempt to access 0xbeff1c8, which is out of bounds' public static void main(String[] args) throws Exception { if(args.length>1) { String wordsToSentence = args[0]; for(int i=0; igetdata(); } } This is the code. I think I just need to let the pointer point to a specific location but for some reason it doesn't work. A: I fixed it. This is not the answer but I solved my own problem in case anyone is interested: public static void main(String[] args) throws Exception { if(args.length>1) { String wordsToSentence = args[0]; for(int i=0; i
