□ Read RSS feeds on the Google Desktop □ Operate with the Google Desktop □ Highlights personal and commercial news □ Option to choose the poll frequency □ Option to choose the color to use for highlighting Some screenshots of the gdRSS Reader: really like the German Heuer Split second chronograph, and I would consider it to be more versatile than the original, and only because of the split second. However, as an absolute chronograph, the segmet indication is far superior to the seconds, requiring less power, and since the 1 second is less than a second, you could even set the chronograph to run in stop mode, but turn the second hand off, so it only display the segmet indicator. The 1 second is about 0.1 second, so you could stop it there. It is a lot more powerful than the original chronograph (the original used a tiny fraction of the power) but completely different, and even more accurate. Still, the original seems more powerful and versatile, since you can set it to any second (although there are only 3 fields, so less accuracy). Both are fine watches, I just like the Split second chronograph slightly more, since it is more versatile, and it's just a nice piece of watchmaking.

American idol, in the words of the television singing competition's theme song. Toronto's Ryan Drummond (pictured) got a standing ovation in his audition last week, when judges Simon Cowell, Ellen DeGeneres, and Kara DioGuardi liked his original song, "Home." "I don't feel like a winner right now," said Drummond, a 24-year-old musician who's been playing since he was five. "I'm just so proud of being a part of this moment. So what if I didn't win -- I feel like I won the whole thing." The song was written for Drummond's dad, who had been fighting cancer for a decade. When Drummond submitted the song during the auditions, he had no idea he was competing against an Elvis, Gaga or Justin Bieber. "I just closed my eyes and prayed to be on the show," he said. "They were my idol when I was a kid and I thought it was the coolest thing, so I just wanted to pay b7e8fdf5c8
