Oziexplorer 3.95.5.r Download TorrentQ: Screen recording on iPhone device I am writing a simple app for iOS which includes an ability to record video. Now I want to do screen recording without screen capturing. The reason for this is that I want to achieve desired visual effects using filter or modify some HTML elements on screen. There is only one way to do this - use the PhoneCam app. However, it's free, and unfortunately its author doesn't have any documentation/demo code. I was thinking about writing all visual effects using OpenGL and keeping only a recorded screen image, but I don't know how this would work. Is there any solution for recording video and keeping only a recorded image? A: After some research I found a library It's a library for capturing only a screen and save this video into a file. I modified the project a bit, so now I can save a frame from my app at any time. Q: Do subtypes prevent being cast to their supertype and if so why? Below I've got a 3-tuple of 3 (that's to say, a double) as well as a 3-tuple with an Int as the first value, and a String as the other. I've created a generic method with the 3-tuple as a parameter. It basically creates a new instance of the same type as the provided parameter: open class Obj { open val a: Int open val b: Int } fun createObj
