The data shows what happens during a typical game: where players go, how fast they accelerate and decelerate, how long they spend in offball situations, and other key game factors that can impact decision making. Fans will be able to see these factors in-game and use the new data to build their own unique tactics and formations. This means fans have unprecedented control over how they enjoy their favorite video game. “This new technology is like an arrow pointing us in the right direction to create a game that really plays like real football,” said Oliver Platt, Senior Producer. “The data collected from real, high-intensity player movements is added to the mix, delivering a FIFA game that’s more natural and in which fans will have the ability to control the flow of the game.” The game features several game mechanics set to work seamlessly together, to bring the best football experience possible. The different game types, such as “Live,” “Champions League,” and “Historic Challenges,” employ the introduction of such game mechanics as Total Team Control (TTC), which unlocks game play once the team achieve a high score in a specific game type. When it comes to games like Mafia III it can be easy for a studio to get carried away with ideas and not produce it right. In this case this happened and it was a MAJOR let down. I would not buy it or recommend anyone to buy it. When I think of a Mafia game it should be just you killing your way through people. Not paying to kill people. So umm how is it Mafia type if you are paying people to kill people? Check out my other game reviews: -----

Starting in the last decades of the last century, FIFA has gone from being merely a game to being a franchise. The game has stayed true to its roots with its positioning on the core principles of the beautiful game while evolving to cover new ways of engaging with the fans. The game has the traditional football experience, where players are constantly connected through ball-oriented gameplay. However, with more emphasis placed on the new aspects of the game. In FIFA 20, more than a decade of development has gone into building the player models and the physical performance that are based on the analysis of elite athletes. Players receive individual feedback for all the attributes that define them such as speed, acceleration and accuracy. The physics in the game are also improved to give players a wider range of motion across more and varied body parts. The realism of the game is extended further still with the increase of the number of variables in the Physiological and Psychological traits that define the player. The mechanics of the game also have a more realistic feeling to them with ball control changing dynamically based on every decision the player makes. Even the way the ball bounces is unique to every player. The game also adds a new component to the game development process called The Journey, which lets fans play different versions of the game and makes them part of the development process in order to make the game as authentic as possible. With their influence being seen in every aspect of the game. Powered by Football The game was packed with the technological innovations that made the last FIFA different and two of the main goals of this year are focused on bringing back the style and depth of the last FIFA while also bringing the game's fidelity closer to the real experience. The tutorial is condensed into a more intuitive interface that makes players more aware of the training and practice techniques and, for the first time, includes tutorials for the new skills and behaviors. The Training and Practice fields that took place in all FUT games are also removed and split up into two sections that focus on the goalkeeper and defenders in order to give more depth. It also brings a focus back to keeping the defensive lines at 0.5 meters to give the ball possession and confidence to keep possession against the defense.

New Seasons Of Innovation The Journey brings the fans even closer to the game with the introduction of the Game Director Mode, which lets every player watch how their favorite coaches designed their tactics, formations and substitutions and would change the game completely if they were put on the field
