Adobe Photoshop
Elements is used primarily for simple, low-quality work, but it's a great option to learn Photoshop if you are starting out, especially if you work in a print-based professional setting. Adobe recommends the use of Lightroom because of its comprehensive feature set. It's impossible to cover every feature in this book, but we'll cover the basic features that you need. It's easy to jump in and create images with little to no knowledge of Photoshop and how to use many of its tools. The Photoshop file is always associated with a specific resolution, pixel depth, and bit depth. These are color modes and file formats that are compatible with Photoshop. Learn how to identify these values and work with them in this chapter. Exploring the Paths and Layers Panel The first step toward mastering Photoshop is learning how to use its Paths and Layers panel effectively. It can be a confusing and overwhelming panel to get used to, but don't worry. By the time you have a firm grasp of the basics, it will make much more sense. The first thing that you should do when you start a new Photoshop document is to create your background layer. The purpose of having a background layer in a Photoshop document is to be able to easily drag a color into your document from another program without having to worry about color swapping. Additionally, this is a very basic yet critical practice to ensure that you have properly calibrated and organized work without causing yourself to have to do an "undo" function. The more you practice, the better you'll become at using paths in Photoshop.

Creating Your Background Layers You should create your background layers as soon as you begin a new document in Photoshop.

You can either work your way up from one if you have a template, or you can simply create the first layer before you begin to create any objects on your canvas.

A background layer is automatically placed on the layer at the top of your canvas, and it should always be above all other layers. You can use any color as your background. When you first create a new file with Photoshop, you will be prompted to set up a background color.

With the Select the Background (Shift-I) tool, click where you want the border to be, and drag your mouse down to the border you want (Figure 5-1). Keep the tool active while you drag. When you release the mouse button, Photoshop creates a rectangular selection and places a on the right. You can add image layers into the workspace by clicking and dragging across them from the folder and then select the ones you want to layer. Elements will bring the relevant files down into your workspace. You can also drag and drop files into the workspace. When you're opening an image from the desktop, Elements 11 will automatically open the files into the workspace, even if you're dragging a file over the workspace. The new top panel with the Live Crop view comes with several features: Lens Flare, Color LUT, Color Correction, Overlay, Tone Mapping and Lens Blur. As you can see on the screenshot above, there's a Zoom / Canvas button in the top right of the panel. This will zoom the image, making it easier to use the main panel. The image is split into four (4) panes, each with a different function. In the Lens Flare pane, you can see that a new Alpha Channel sidebar has a button to Merge & Mask. Elements highlights the sidebars that you can use on your image in the new panel. The Color LUT feature lets you apply a LUT (look up table) to modify your colors in an image. You can also Selective Color and Colorize allow you to add or remove colors from images. Allows you to remove or blur parts of a photo while leaving the areas that you select in the picture intact. The Magic Eraser has a special mode to help you remove dust and other imperfections. The Liquify tool will let you stretch or squish an object. The Adjustment Brush allows you to pick colors from different parts of an image, then adjust the colors of the overall photo. The Pen tool allows you to draw lines, circles, arcs, and rectangles, and edit them into desired shapes. The Brush tool allows you to paint freehand. The Magic Wand is like a paint bucket that will select the desired area in an image. The Move Tool allows you to move an object around a canvas. The Crop Tool lets you crop an image. The Healing Brush will help you fix small problems in images. The Hand Tool lets you draw with your hand. The Gradient tool allows you to select an area and then edit it in different directions. The Pencil Tool allows you to make lines and other patterns with your pencil. The Bevel and Emboss tool lets you make 3D looks on photos, as well as make the photos appear to have a textured edge. The Selective Color tool lets you change the color of an object in an image. The Paint Bucket tool lets you paint colors onto an image. The Inkwell Tool lets you create a brush with the colors of a printed page. The Puppet Warp tool allows you to manipulate the position and movement of images and objects. The Perspective Grid tool will allow you to view an image on the grid. The Magic Lens tool will let you get an effect similar to that of a camera lens. The Blend tool will allow you to combine textures of different colors. The Spot Healing Brush tool will help you fix small or obvious image glitches. The Gradient Map tool will let you create smooth images. The Opacity Masking tool will mask the portions of an image that are not transparent. The Shadow and Highlight tool will let you add effects to images like a black-and-white effect. The Gradient Overlay tool will help you create subtle gradients. The Blur tool will blur an image, or some portions

2016 Fruitcake Kit Club Has A New Name! The Fruitcake Club is a club for single mothers and those who are struggling to raise a family. Now, the club will be called “The Relatively
Unimportant Tastiness Club” because it is more relevant and helpful for all of us. It is about the choices you can make to help yourself and your family. Don't you want to be happy? You can still be successful and have a successful family while you're happy? Some of us, when we're faced with a challenge, are prepared to figure out and solve the challenge. We have the will and the desire. But when the time comes for the ultimate sacrifice, we're not prepared. The club has a Facebook page that is posted every morning. It has 603 people that are in the club. That is a lot of people! Over 2000 people! I want to thank the first President of the club, Debbie Creswell, who has volunteered to serve as the club's president again this year. I also want to thank those people who are part of the club with me. Thank you. I appreciate you. I love you! I want to share with you this last message before I sign off today. Have you ever heard of the “Pet Business”? If you and your husband were to have a pet business, how much money would you be able to make?

Consider that for your decision. If you’re a single mother, you really must consider your choices. When you are so focused on finances and how you’re going to meet the next paycheck, you might have a possible opportunity to help yourself and your family. Think about it. With $2000, you could meet your household budget for the month. I don't know if you have heard of "Calm down Mama" in the Nesbitt Family series. The links below will take you to the books and to my blog.
