Edit.The mayor of the town of Longueuil, Manon Volat, would prefer Canadian History to be taught like it used to be, free of political correctness. In recent years, schools have taken a more critical approach to Canadian history, and even removed references to the word "Indigenous" from history textbooks. Volat has lived in Longueuil all her life and was a teacher before becoming mayor. Volat told CTV's Your Morning that she is against the changes, as she feels that they are making history "more politicized". She said it "doesn't help our students who are coming up to uni, and it's not really accurate either." "When I ask my students 'where is Longueuil' is Longueuil
